Android holds 85% market share in smartphones. It has been gaining market share steadily over the years and has been adopted by many major smartphone manufacturers. However, users of android devices often complain about certain major issues they face - the most common are reduced battery life, unnecessary & unused apps taking up space and reduction in the performance of their device. Being an Android user myself, our aim was to fix some of these core issues with the help of a solution that is how RedGreen came to fruition "said Asokan Ashok, CEO, UnfoldLabs. "We are very proud that the first app developed by UnfoldLabs has been chosen by an expert panel as a finalist at the CTIA E-Tech awards in the Customer Experience Category."

"We were very pleased to be one of the first app stores to release RedGreen to the marketplace," said Brian J. Friedman, CEO of neXva. "We have 25 operator branded stores serving over 150M Android users and we found the reaction to the unique functionality of RedGreen to be extremely positive. Users need an 'all-in-one' tool to manage their Android device and RedGreen very well serves that need."

The CTIA Super Mobility 2016 is one of the largest wireless events in America and the E-Tech awards represent the highest honors in the industry for a product/app. RedGreen will also be showcased at the awards showcase at CTIA Super Mobility 2016 from September 7- 8th and will be one of the entrants eligible for the Crowd Favorite vote.
